"For the type of construction we're looking at, there are other boards on the market that purport to be the same or have similar properties," Pospisil said in a pre-conference phone interview. "This is an accredited presentation, so I can't flaunt the brand name, but the International Code Council (ICC) has defined this category of structural panel by publishing two acceptance criteria: AC318 for the panels themselves, and AC319 for the panel performance on cold-formed steel. Currently, only Fortacrete structural panels meet the requirements of both acceptance criteria, as we have a published ICC report number ESR-1792."
